

The verbose-trad3 style

This is another traditional style which uses the scholarly abbreviations ibidem and op. cit. In contrast to `verbose-trad2`, ibidem denotes ‘same author + same title + same page’ and op. cit. denotes ‘same author + same title’ in this style. All other citations are based on the title.

Additional package options

The strict option

By default, this style will only use ibidem and op. cit. if the respective citations are given in the same footnote or in consecutive footnotes. The point of this restriction is also to avoid potentially ambiguous citations. Here’s an example:

... \footcite{aristotle:anima}
... \footcite{aristotle:anima}
... \footnote{Aristotle touches upon this issue
            in his \emph{Rhetoric}.}
... \footcite{aristotle:anima}

This could be rendered as follows:

- 1 Aristotle. De Anima. Ed. by Robert Drew Hicks. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1907.
- 2 Aristotle, op. cit.
- 3 Aristotle touches upon this issue in his Rhetoric.
- 4 Aristotle, op. cit.

What does the op. cit. in the last footnote refer to? The last formal citation, as given in the first and the second footnote (De Anima), or the informal reference in the third one (Rhetoric)? To avoid such citations, this style will only use abbreviations if the respective citations are given in the same footnote or in consecutive footnotes:

- 1 Aristotle. De Anima. Ed. by Robert Drew Hicks. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1907.
- 2 Aristotle, op. cit.
- 3 Aristotle touches upon this issue in his Rhetoric.
- 4 Aristotle, De Anima.

Depending on your writing and citing habits, however, you may prefer the less strict ibidem and op. cit. handling. You can force that by setting the package option `strict=false` in the preamble. It is still possible to mark a manually inserted discursive citation with `\mancite` when required:

... \footcite{aristotle:anima}
... \footnote{\mancite Aristotle touches upon this issue
            in his \emph{Rhetoric}.}
... \footcite{aristotle:anima}

This will suppress the op. cit. in the last footnote.

The `citepages` option

Use this option to fine-tune the formatting of the `pages` and `pagetotal` fields in verbose citations. When an entry with a `pages` field is cited for the first time and the `postnote` is a page number or a page range, the citation will end with two page specifications:

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150, p. 125.

In this example, “125” is the `postnote` and “100–150” is the `pages` field (there are similar issues with the `pagetotal` field). This may be confusing to the reader. The `citepages` option controls how to deal with these fields in this case. The option works as follows, given these citations as an example:

\cite{key}
\cite[a note]{key}
\cite[125]{key}

`citepages=permit` allows duplicates, i.e., the style will print both the `pages`/`pagetotal` and the `postnote`. This is the default setting:

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150, a note.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150, p. 125.

`citepages=suppress` unconditionally suppresses the `pages/pagetotal` fields in citations, regardless of the `postnote`:

Author. “Title.” In: Book.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, a note.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, p. 125.

`citepages=omit` suppresses the `pages/pagetotal` in the third case only. They are still printed if there is no `postnote` or if the `postnote` is not a number or range:

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150, a note.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, p. 125.

`citepages=separate` separates the `pages/pagetotal` from the `postnote` in the third case:

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150, a note.

Author. “Title.” In: Book, pp. 100–150, esp. p. 125.

The string “especially” in the third case is the bibliography string `thiscite`, which may be redefined.

The dashed option

By default, this style replaces recurrent authors/editors in the bibliography by a dash so that items by the same author or editor are visually grouped. This feature is controlled by the package option `dashed`. Setting `dashed=false` in the preamble will disable this feature. The default setting is `dashed=true`.

Hints

If you want terms such as ibidem to be printed in italics, redefine `\mkibid` as follows:

\renewcommand*{\mkibid}{\emph{}
